

Facts and figures on public transport at Zurich Airport

With around 350 rail connections and over 700 bus and 400 tram departures a day, Zurich Airport is considered to be one of the best-connected locations in Switzerland.

Zurich city centre is just ten minutes away by public transport, and all the major cities and tourist areas, both in Switzerland and in neighbouring countries, can be reached very quickly.

So no matter where you are going, you can reach your destination quickly and easily using national and regional trains plus local tram and bus services.

Regional buses

16 bus and Postbus routes connect the main municipalities in the Glatt valley, Zürcher Unterland and Zurich Oerlikon regions to the airport. Departures range from every 10 minutes to hourly. The covered bus terminal at Zurich Airport is the largest in Switzerland and has direct access to the check-in areas and the airport's shopping facilities.

Zurich Airport as a public transport hub

With some 70,000 public transport users daily, Zurich Airport has become a key transport hub in the greater Zurich area in terms of passenger frequency. Zurich Airport houses the Zürich Flughafen SBB station, Switzerland's largest covered bus terminal, and the Zürich Flughafen Glattalbahn tram stop.

The Glattalbahn line 10 has been operating since December 2008 and runs between the airport, Oerlikon station and Zurich main station.

Glattalbahn line 12 came into operation on 12 December 2010. It runs from the airport to Stettbach station, providing practical connections to the airport region and the city of Zurich.
